How to Engage with this Worksheet / ● Whatever is stated here (and in the lecture) is a proposal — do not assume it to be true or false. / ● Verify it on your own right, on the basis of your natural acceptance, and validate it in your living. / ● Treat each question as a dialogue: first between you and the material, and then within your own Self — between what you are and what you really want to be.

I will treat the lecture content as a proposal, not assume it true or false. I will verify it on my own right, based on my natural acceptance, and validate it in my living. I will treat each question as a dialogue: first between me and the material, and then within my own Self — between what I am and what I really want to be.

Part B — In-Class Activity

Activity 1: List the nine feelings in relationship in order, and mark which is the foundation value and which is the complete value.

- 1. Trust 2. Respect 3. Affection
- 4. Care 5. Guidance 6. Reverence
- 7. Glory 8. Gratitude 9. Love
- Foundation value = Trust | Complete value = Love

Activity 2: For each pair, tick the feeling that is naturally acceptable to you.

Feeling	or its opposite	Naturally acceptable (tick)
Trust	Mistrust / opposition	Trust
Respect	Disrespect	Respect
Affection	Jealousy	Affection
Care	Exploitation	Care
Guidance	Misguidance / confusion	Guidance
Reverence	Irreverence	Reverence
Glory	Inglorious feelings	Glory
Gratitude	Ingratitude	Gratitude
Love	Hatred	Love

Activity 3: For fulfilling relationship in the family, what do you think of — physical facility (gifts, good food) or feelings (expressing trust, respect...)? Write your honest observation.

- What I usually think of for fulfilling relationship:
- What the deck says is fundamental:
- What I usually think of for fulfilling relationship: I often think of giving gifts, good food, and other physical comforts to make my family happy.
- What the deck says is fundamental: The deck says that feelings like trust, respect, affection, care, guidance, reverence, glory, gratitude, and love are fundamental for fulfilling relationship; physical facility is only a need of the body and cannot replace feelings.

Part C — Long-Answer Questions

Q1. Why is the family called the basic unit of human organisation, and what is the major issue in the family? [5]

The family is called the basic unit of human organisation because it is the smallest social unit where human relationships are first experienced and where the foundation for harmony in society is laid. The major issue in the family is the lack of right understanding and the absence of feelings like trust, respect, and affection, leading to conflict, disharmony, and unfulfilled relationships.

Q2. Explain the four aspects of relationship discussed in the lecture. [5]

The four aspects of relationship are: 1) Feeling – the emotional bond based on natural acceptance, such as trust and respect. 2) Value – the importance we give to the relationship, which is intrinsic and not dependent on physical facility. 3) Intent – the inner motive to fulfil the relationship, which should be based on right understanding. 4) Competence – the ability to actualise the feeling in behaviour, ensuring that the relationship is expressed correctly. These four aspects together ensure a harmonious relationship.

Q3. List the nine feelings in relationship in order, identifying the foundation value and the complete value. [5]

The nine feelings in relationship in order are: 1. Trust, 2. Respect, 3. Affection, 4. Care, 5. Guidance, 6. Reverence, 7. Glory, 8. Gratitude, 9. Love. The foundation value is Trust and the complete value is Love.

Q4. Why can physical facility not compensate for a lack of feelings in relationship? [5]

Physical facility can only satisfy the needs of the body, such as food, clothing, and shelter, but it cannot fulfil the needs of the Self, which are feelings like trust, respect, and affection. A relationship is based on feelings, and without these feelings, even the best physical facilities leave a sense of emptiness and dissatisfaction. Therefore, physical facility cannot compensate for the lack of feelings in a relationship.

Q5. Reflect on your notion of relationship — is it based on the Self or on the Body? Do you think of ensuring these feelings in yourself and expressing them, or of getting them from the other? [5]

My notion of relationship is often based on the Body, as I tend to associate it with physical presence and material exchanges. However, I realise that true relationship is based on the Self, which is the seat of feelings. I usually think of getting feelings like respect and care from the other, but I need to shift to ensuring these feelings in myself and expressing them, because that is the only way to establish a harmonious relationship.

Self-Reflection (Take-Home)

• When you think of relationship, is it within your family only, or also outside your family? What is the scope of relationship for you? (Slide 24)

• Are you making effort to ensure the right feelings in yourself and express them, or are you expecting these feelings from the other? (Slide 24)

• When I think of relationship, I usually think of my family, but I also have relationships with friends, teachers, and others outside the family. The scope of relationship for me is not limited to family; it extends to all human beings, as we are all interconnected.

• I am making some effort to ensure the right feelings in myself and express them, but I often catch myself expecting these feelings from the other. I need to be more conscious and consistent in expressing trust, respect, and care without expecting anything in return.
